

Q Now Saturday: do you remember anything particular on Saturday?

A No, sir; I know I was home about one o'clock. Oh, here is something comes to my mind; it was this: I forget now who was in there, there were so many at the time in the parlor, that is to the left as you go out.

Q Go out, yes.

A Yes, on the Redmond Street side; and I was reading a copy of the New York Times. Mrs. Charlie Carpender Sr. came in and said "You might as well know it. Edward has been shot." I remember those words, and with that I put my head down and commenced crying.

Q Was she the first person from whom you learned about the murder?

A Yes, sir, and I remember the paper just dropped out of my hand.

Q Did she tell you that Mrs. Mills had also been shot?

A No, sir.

Q Just that Edward had been shot?

A Yes, sir; and that was, I think, just after dinner. I know I hadn't gone out. I couldn't place the time.

Q You have heard this story about your having gone down to Cune's cigar store and made the remark of something terrible having happened at your house. Is
